WEEKLY BULLETIN OF THE MCCE

From 4 to 11 September 2026

The Army strengthens its cyberdefence capacity with new systems equipped with artificial intelligence

The Army awards a contract of almost two hundred thousand euros to equip the Electronic Warfare Regiment 31 with new technological equipment. The tender includes a high-performance server with advanced graphics processors to process large volumes of data.

+ More information

Accessible automated cyberattacks increase the threat

The democratisation of cybercrime allows contracting automated attacks at very low costs through platforms on the network. These tools simplify the execution of massive offensives without requiring advanced technical knowledge.

+ More information

The Bank of England warns that AI can cause a financial crisis

The Bank of England warns the G20 that cyberattacks driven by artificial intelligence could trigger a global financial crisis. The concentration of the sector aggravates the risk of simultaneous and massive failures.

+ More information

WEEKLY BULLETIN OF THE MCCE

From 4 to 11 September 2026

Further developments in AI and defence

Additional information on the integration of artificial intelligence in military systems and the associated risks.

+ More information

Financial sector alerts

Updates on the potential impact of AI-powered attacks on financial stability.

+ More information

Other news

Defence technology updates

New equipment and capabilities for electronic warfare and cyberdefence units.

+ More information

Cybercrime trends

Analysis of the accessibility of automated attack tools and their implications for organisations.

+ More information